SECKER DIES; DICKENSON RETAINED

Jesse Secker, local youth who was found with a crushed skull in an abated Woodside saloon about three weeks ago, passed away late last Friday afternoon of scarlet fever, induced by the fracture of the skull. Upon being found Secker was rushed to the Community hospital, where he was under care until his death.

Immediately after the discovery of Secker, Ralph Dickenson of Woodside was arrested and charged with having beaten the injured man over the head with a shot gun. Since that time he has been held in the county jail awaiting the outcome of Secker's injuries. Since his death Dickenson has been facing a murder charge.

At the inquest which was held Monday the jury determined that the death was caused by the injuries received at the beating in the Woodside saloon.

Dickenson was at first charged with manslaughter, but upon the findings of the jury the charge of murder was substituted and a charge of assalt with a deadly weapon was sworn to in the court of Justice of the Peace Ray Griffin last Saturday, and the bale at that time set at $5,000 cash or $10,000 bond.

The chief witnesses at the inquest were Dr. Murphy who attended the deceased, and Mrs. Mae Feliz who was with Secker at the time and who told of the fight between the two men. According to the latter witness, the aggression was all on the part of Dickenson. Secker tried to avoid trouble, she stated.

The story as told by Mrs. Feliz was as follows: She and Secker went to Nelson's place in Woodside and met Dickenson. The men had been drinking, she claimed, and Dickenson was in an aggressive mood. Later she left Nelson's place and went across the road to Frienne's. Dickenson followed shortly after and made advances to her which she resented. He then became abusive and accused her of stealing $200 from him. Dickenson then struck her in the face, Mrs. Feliz testified. Secker then appeared and Dickenson accused him of taking his money. He then struck Secker and knocked him down.

Mrs. Feliz then testified that a shot gun was standing in the corner, and she siezed this and ordered Dickenson to stop beating Secker. Dickenson then took the gun away from her and beat Secker over the head with it. At the time she did not think that Secker was badly hurt, Mrs. Feli testified.

The deceased was the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Secker of this city and the brother of George and Eugene Secker. He was born in La Honda and was 31 years of age.

The funeral of the young man was held Monday at the parlors of of the James Crowe Company. The pall bearers were all members of Redwood Parlor of Native Sons of which the deceased was a member. Rev. R. J. Currie conducted the services. Interment was in Cypress Lawn cemetery.

The fight between the Ravenswooders, and East Palo Altoans, has long been of interest to the parties immediately concerned. It has never before, however, lead to a complaint to the county authorities. The present affair has been placed in the hands of the sheriff, and a reward of $25 is offered for the arrest of anyone found destroying signs of this character.

FIREMEN'S BANQUET BIG SUCCESS

The Redwood City fire department has long been considered an organization capable of "putting things over," their banquet last Monday night leaves no room for doubt. About four hundred firemen, their wives and friends gathered in the Masonic hall and enjoyed a dinner which might, perhaps be equaled, but never excelled.

The cusine was under the direction of Mark Ryan and Harry Groom and the results obtained by these gentlemen won the approval and acclamation of everyone.

In order that the entire fire department might enjoy this banquet, Fire Chief Mark Ryan had had a fire gong, register tape, and telephone installed and the fire apparatus stationed at the rear door of the building in case of an alarm. Fortunately, however, no call disturbed the enjoyment of the occasion.

The banquet of the department is an annual affair and is always looked forward to by the local firemen. The department is composed of the following:

OUR POLICY

WE wish to correct an impression which some of our readers seem to have gathered from our editorial of last week concerning the political affiliations of this paper. Since its beginning in 1859 the Times-Gazette has been a Republican paper. It has championed everything connected with the Good Old Party and has stood by every issue. It was not intended to imply that the affiliations of over a half century should be overturned at one sweep of the pen. So far as party issues are concerned, the Times-Gazette is Republican and will support Republican policies and Republican candidates in the future with all the loyalty and ardor that it has in the past. In all local matters the paper, as stated last week, will support the best man no matter what his political affiliations may be.

It will also be absolutely independent so far as local policies are concerned. It will criticise if it can make the criticism constructive. It will not find fault but will at all times try to boost Redwood City and its interests.

Although Mr. D. E. O'Keefe is giving over the active control of this paper, he will still maintain his interest in its conduct and policy, and asks for the gentlemen who will conduct it the same cordial support which he always had.

—o—o—o—

A TRIBUTE

WITH this issue of the Times-Gazette, Mr. D. E. O'Keefe relinquishes the active management of the paper, he having leased the business to Mr. John Isaac and Mr. Stanley Netherton. For nearly thirty-five years Mr. O'Keefe has been a familar figure in Redwood City and its business life.

There has probably never been a better known man in this community than Denny O'Keefe and his kindly word and cheery greetings were given to man, woman and child with equal heartiness.

Mr. O'Keefe has for sometime past been connected with the government service as Assistant Appraiser of Merchandise of the Port of San Francisco. He has felt that his duties there demand all of his time, hence the transfer of interests. He will, however, boost for Redwood City and will at all times continue his interest in this paper and its welfare.

He has regrets at leaving the business interests of this town, where practically all of his life work has been done, but he leaves the newspaper work with the knowledge that he has done his best for the town the state and the nation.

A WORKMAN WORTHY HIS HIRE

A national figure was laid away recently in Sleepy Hollow cemetery. Samuel Gompers, after a long and hard fight for the rights of the worker, has been called to greater work in the higher realms. But though Gompers is dead his influence will be long left in America, and the condition of the workingman is far better for his having lived. What better work can a man set himself to? That a man who earns his living by the work of his hands is as much of a man as the employer for whom he labors is now a generally accepted premise; one hundred or even sixty years ago it was not. Human beings cannot be measured in tons, in horsepower, or even in output. This fact understood, Gomper's work would have been unnecessary. Deny the human element in labor and there is sure to follow strife and friction between employed and employer. The human element taken into consideration, and directed into its natural channels will result in harmony and co-operation.

This, then, the forcing into recognition the fact that labor is not a bulk quantity, but an amalgomation of individual natures with individual aspirations and individual attractions, has been the great work of unionism. The leadership has not always been the best, and often the means employed will not stand close scrutiny, but the result speaks for itself.

Never in our history; never in the history of our world, we believe, have the men who work, received so fair a share of the fruits of their labors. For this they may in a large degree thank Samuel Gompers, the man who lived that labor might receive its reward.

ONE MAN AND HIS WORK

TO some, perhaps, the year which has just passed is just another year lived, but to Luther Burbank, amid his flowers at Santa Rosa the year has not been just twelve months of existence, but a period of accomplishment. Life to Burbank seems to be a constant effort at accomplishment, an effort richly rewarded we would think, yet he apparently gives little thought to what has been done, and is ever working on something in the future.

During the year Burbank has produced two new flowers; has created a new and superior type of corn; and a hardier and more productive type of wheat. Any one of these foregoing productions might be considered a worthy year's work for a man. Yet to Burbank these are only a part of his every day labors.

Luther Burbank is a man who works with nature. Planning his work along the lines of nature's law, he can accomplish what to the layman appears a miracle. He who finds the plan of life and directs his efforts in the futherance of the plan of nature, cannot fail in accomplishment. It is the man who ignorantly or perversely endeavors to twist the laws of nature to his purposes who fails. Burbank has found the plan and is working toward it.

CAN WOMEN KEEP SECRETS?

Those who know Miss Cora Rubin, who for eighteen years has been secretary to Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, have no doubt that this woman at least has kept many a secret. Now as secretary to the distinguished senator who becomes chairman of the powerful Foreign Relations Committee, Miss Rubin's position becomes even moer important. It is said that the efficient MRubin entirely handled Senator Borah's senate campaign in Idaho. She herself is a resident of Boise, Idaho.

IS THE COUNTRY PRESS DOOMED?

AN exchange published in the great state of California says: "The average country editor prefers to publish news telling about the good fortune that has come to one of his friends in the community. The metropolitan daily seeks to make big news out of the sorrow and disgrace that have fallen upon one of the thousands of strangers who live in the city. And yet there are people who say that the country press is doomed."

Enough said!

FORD BUYERS TO SAVE THREE-QUARTERS OF A MILLION

The reduction in prices announced by the Ford Motor Company becoming effective December, saved over threequarter of a million dollars to Ford car buyers during the month of December alone. That this amount was left to the car buyers to spend on holiday gifts and other things is based on a conservative estimate of December sales, according to reports of the San Francisco Ford branch.

The largest cut in the Ford list was that of $55 in the price of the Fordor Sedan, one of the most attractive closed cars and one which is a favorite for family use.

Prices on other Ford types were also reduced, bringing all of them to the lowest price level in the history of the company.

"A Sainted Devil," Rudolph Valentino's second Paramount starring picture since his return to the screen, will be the feature at the Sequoia Theatre on Broadway, next Monday and Tuesday, Jan. 5-6.

With an excellent suporting cast, a story of dash and color, and rich settings which depict the Argentine and life in the Buenos Aires, "A Sainted Devil" is said to surpass even "Monsieur Beaucaire," which was recently received by critics and public alike with great acclaim. In this picture, which Forrest Halsey adapted from Rex Beach's story, "Rope's End," Valentino portarys the role of Don Alonza Castro, a spirited young South American who travels up and down the scale of love and who fights at the drop of the hat for the woman he loves.

Helen D'Algy has the role of Julietta, a dark-eyed, raven-haired beauty who captures all the space in Don Alonzo's heart despite the efforts of Carlotta, played by Nita Naldi, Dona Florencia, Dagmur Godowsky; and Carmelita, Louise Lagrange; who try to win him away. George Siegman has the colorful role of El Tigre, the wild bandit of the pampas, and other members of the cast are Antonio D'Algy, Jean Del Val, Roger Lytton, Isabel West, Raphael Bongini, Frank Montgomery, William Betts, Edward Elkus, A. De Rosa, Ann Brody, Evelyn Axzell and Marie Diller.

In the picture Valentino is given an opportunity to do the Argentine Tango for which he has gained considerable reputation and he has fights galore with bandits and bad men of the Argentine.

The hacienda life of the Argentine is shown in this production as well as the smart life of Buenos Aires, the Paris of the Americas.

Cleaning Without Odor by the F. Thomas Process

Our many years of experience has taught us that it is impossible to do perfect cleaning with cheap, inferior methods. That is why we found it necessary to invest nearly $500,000 in the equipment of a plant and the establishment of an expert organization to do the quality of work demanded by our customers.

With the "F. Thomas Process" we not only remove every particle of dust but we return your garments without that usual disagreeable smell of gasoline. Every drop of gasoline we use in cleaning is redistilled and very highly refined.

Raw gasoline—the kind that you buy for your automobile—is full of heavy oils and unfit for cleaning fabrics. It is little better than ordinary distillate and leaves a sickening "gasoline" smell in your clothes

Gems of Architecture in India and Italy

Taj Mahal is the costliest private tomb in the world, and was built by the Indian ruler Shah Jehan as a final resting place for the remains of his favorite wife, Mumtaz-I-Mahal, "the pride of the palace." This mausoleum, which is accounted by some critics to be the most beautiful building ever constructed, is one mile east of Agra, and its erection covered a period of 21 years, starting in 1629 and ending in 1650. It is built entirely of white alabaster, and is believed to have cost over $9,000,000.

Saint Peter's church is the largest and most imposing Christian church in the world, but is not conceded to pass the architectural beauty of Taj Mahal. The approach to it is through an open space, the Piazza di San Pietro, which is elliptical in form, covers several acres and is surrounded by colonnades, or covered driveways. In the center of this piazza stands a red granite obelisk 80 feet in height, which was brought from Egypt in the days of Caligula, but was not erected here until the Sixteenth century, when the church was in process of construction.

About the walls on the interior of the church there are altars, chapels, tombs, and innumerable works of art; while beneath the center of the dome rises the high altar, at which only the pope or a specially authorized cardinal may officiate; and above this towers the great bronze canopy, 95 feet in height. The total cost of the building is estimated at about $50,000,000, and considerable difficulty was experienced in raising this sum.

The passing of the old year and the coming of the new was watched by various parties throughout Redwood Sunday night, and in various ways. Some passed the dying hours with services of devotion, while others chose exercises of a lighter vein.

On New Years C. Peterson, the shoe dealer, fulfilled an agreement made twenty-five years ago in Des Moines, Iowa. He and a fellow workman, named Frank Sonderleiter, agreed that wherever they might be in 1900, they would meet and the wealthier of the two should pay for an elaborate dinner. Shortly afterward the two men separated, losing trace of each other. Some years ago their whereabouts were discovered to one another, neither had forgotten the pledge made to each other twenty-five years ago. On Monday Mr. Peterson went to Oakland at the expense of Mr. Sonderleiter and partook of a delicious dinner. The latter gentleman is now a wealthy resident of Oakland and was pleased to keep his agreement. He went further, however, and presented Mr. Peterson with a silver mounted match box, suitably inscribed.

TELEPHONE ACTIVE IN NEWS DESIMINATION

An unprecedented demand on the part of the American public for news while it is "hot" has been met by the devising of six separate uses of telephone wires, during the present year. The wires are now used for local telephone purposes, for long distance telephone conversations, for telegraphing news stories to newspapers, for connecting up the public address system, used so extensively during the recent presidential campaign and for connecting up sixteen radio stations scattered over the country. In addition to these widely used and now common features has come the perfection of complicated equipment for sending photographs, finger-prints, cartoons and sketches by telephone, according to a summary received by J.D.Worthington, manager for the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company in this district.

During the forty-odd years since the telephone was invented by Alexander Graham Bell, the art and methods of communication by wire advanced rapidly until, not long ago, means were devised to send both telegraph and telephone messages over the same wires at the same time. The developments of 1924, however, have pushed such startling feats into the background.

Mine Brought Wealth to Fortunate Mexican

Pachuca, capital of the state of Hidalgo, Mexico, is one of the world's greatest and most famous mining centers, according to a bulletin of the National Geographic society. One of Pachuca's silver mines, the Real del Monte, contained the counterpart of Nevada's famous Comstock lode.

An inconspicuous muleteer became the owner of the Pachuca's mine in 1739, when its value was unknown. His pick opened up a bonanza vein such as seldom has been uncovered. Soon he was a multimillionaire, in a day when even millionaires were rare. He presented several fully equipped warships to the king of Spain and for his happy thought was made a count—Conde de Santa Maria de Regla.

The famous mine came to a tragic end soon after the count's rise to fortune, by the bursting into it of a subterranean river. Its drowned riches remained untouched until near the middle of the Nineteenth century, when efforts to reopen it by British engineers led to frenzied speculation and a crash among London investors rivaling those of the Mississippi bubble. Local Pachucans bought up the bankrupt company and promptly found a second bonanza vein even richer than the first.

Able to Endure Long Periods of Fasting

Some curious facts with respect to the capacity for fasting as exhibited by various animals are cited by Siegmund Urabin in the Umchau (Frankfurt), according to the Detroit News. He begins by observing:

"The power of the camel to do without taking food is regarded in most works on zoology as representing scientific peculiarities of animals. But if there were a general knowledge of the ability of many animals to fast for very long periods of time these instances would not be so overemphasized. It is, indeed, generally known that even mammals are able to fast for months during their winter hibernation, but it seems to be almost unknown that the same power exists among the lower animals. The power of fasting is much more widespread in them than was formerly supposed."

Mr. Urabin then refers to an experience of his youth when he put certain snails which had already withdrawn into their shells and closed the opening thereof, as is their custom, into a box, whereupon he forgot them for a period of more than a year and a half. He supposed they were inevitably dead, but when he put them into a vessel filled with water, much to his surprise, they came out of their shells and crawled gaily about on the table.

Widow Stately Recognizes the Voice of Freddie Freedman, Mischief Maker

Friend Wife Satisfied There is No Party of the Third Part

THE Widow Stately's home lay in a nook in the foothills where the sun in mornings came up from the east. At noon he poured down gently among the evergreens that clothed the hillsides of her little farm, and in the evenings, before time for sunset on the plains below, he faded out in yellow splendor over stark white peaks that guarded the widow's valley from the west.

The Widow Stately had been a widow even when she came into that little nook in the foothills with her son Frank, a winsome lad of fourteen or thereabouts. Here they had "dug in" with their little herd of heifers, and Frank had plowed the valley field for oats and potatoes, and, with the help of a carpenter, they had built the house of spruce logs where a mountain stream gurgled lullabies in the still nights.

At the end of the six years they were on their feet. The fields had extended; the herd had grown; the cream cans went down to town three times a week; there was new furniture in the log house and a lilt of song again in the widow's heart. But one new pang was hers; mother love could not quite stifle the pang when her handsome Frank rode out with the yellow-haired Allison girl from south of the ridge.

At the end of that same six years came the war. And now the Widow Stately is doubly a widow, and the Allison girl is old before her time.

Down the valley a mile or more live the Freedmans. And Freddie Freedman, at fourteen, unhappily runs to mischief, as the sparks fly upward. Was it not Freddie who left the Stately gates open at Halloween? Was it not Freddie who unbolted the reach in the widow's wagon? Who but Freddie transposed the front and rear wheels of her buckboard? Who but Freddie shot the wild ducks which she was taming, and drank cream in her dairy when she had gone to town?

And tonight, as a blanket of Christmas snow carpets the foothills and the valley, the widow returns from town with her melancholy parcels for Christmas cheer. Tonight the fire will burn on her hearth, and strange visions will wax and wane in the glow of embers; visions of the First Frank and the Second Frank, and a nightmare of horror at Vimy Ridge. The fire will die out, and Christmas will creep in, wan and cheerless and alone.

But as she drives up by the log house she sees a sturdy young figure at work in the woodshed, and—can she be dreaming?—the spruce logs at the end of the house have been cut and piled for the winter's burning. And the sturdy young figure comes out and takes her horses by the head.

"Let me put your team away while you go in and warm yourself, Mrs. Stately," said a voice. "See, I have started a fire for you."

So like Frank it seemed that she dared not break the spell. Without a word, she sank in the rocker by the fire.

But he was so long in coming that at length she went to the door. The sturdy figure was just disappearing down the road in the gray cloud of night.

"Who are you? Who are you?" she called after him.

"I am the Spirit of Christmas," he answered.

And then she knew his voice. "You're not!" she laughed. "You're Freddie Freedman!"

* * * * * * *

Friend Husband had had a busy day at the office and Friend Wife had moped all day at home.

It seemed to Friend Wife that her husband took his office duties altogether too complacently. For a time after they were married he always was home before six; now he was frequently late. And he didn't seem properly distressed over it. That was what worried her most.

So Friend Wife learned to mope a little, and to complain a little, and to wonder a good deal. And the more she moped and complained the less did Friend Husband hurry from the office. The office had become his retreat.

Moreover, there was the Party of the Third Part. Friend Wife had never seen the Party of the Third Part, but she could not doubt her existence. For a year back her husband had forgotten to kiss her when he went to the office, and when he came home. And on those rare nights when he stayed at home he read the newspaper, and yawned, and found the time heavy on his hands. So you see there must be a Party of the Third Part.

This fear gripped the little woman so deeply that one night she determined she would know the worst. Her husband had not come home to dinner; he had telephoned that he was very busy in the office. He would just slip out and have a bite. And he would likely be late—don't sit up . . . She would know the truth!

So she put on a long cloak, and a veil affair that she could draw over her face, and she went straight to his office in time to intercept him before he left for his appointment. A light shone through the frosted doors, but all inside was silent as the tomb.

"He has gone already!" she exclaimed to herself. Then she gently tried the door. It opened to her hand. Her eyes swept a vista of deserted desks. How forlorn and irksome they looked! But everyone was gone. No! There at the end sat an oldish man. It was her husband! It had never struck her before that her husband was beginning to be an oldish man. He had not heard her. He was intent over a statement with long columns of figures, and he was making calculations on a pad of paper before him.

From where she stood she could see the gray tinge about his temples, and the thinning hair on the top of his head. His brow was set in deep furrows. And suddenly Friend Wife found herself swallowing desperately at something in her throat. Suddenly she knew that there was no Party of the Third Part, and never had been a Party of the Third Part, and that she was a foolish, wicked woman.

She drew the door gently shut. In the basement of the building was a restaurant; where also was a waiter who, for a consideration, would carry a meal to her husband's office. Quickly she gave the order, for two; it was to be a modest meal, not too expensive, but healthful, and garnished with love.

The waiter carried it in and set it down on the little correspondence table beside Friend Husband's desk. And a beautiful woman sat down beside it, and held out her hands to the troubled man with the long column of figures, and smiled.

"Who are you? Who are you?" he demanded.

"I am the Spirit of Christmas," she said.

"You are more than that!" he cried. "You are my wife . . . my . . . my love!"

THE HOUSE OF CHRISTMAS

To an open house in the evening
Home shall men come,
To an older place than Eden
And a taller town than Rome.

To the end of the way of the wandering star,
To the things that cannot be and that are,
To the place where God was homeless
And all men are at home.
—G. K. Chesterton.

A TRUE PROVERB

It was nearly twelve o'clock on Christmas Eve and the magic hour that would usher in the Christmas genius was about to strike, but with Mrs. Fogarty it was never too late to mend, and a long stocking, with a needle sticking in the last stitch of the last hole, lay in her lap as she slept in her chair. No sound of bells awakened her, and when she opened her eyes upon the gifts that had replaced the emptiness of the stocking and the darning ball at its heel she could only account for the kindness of her unknown friend by ejaculating, "Well, well, Santa Claus himself must have been here, but who does he think I am, I wonder?"—C. G. Hazard.

Cupid Will Command Liner on World Cruise

MOTHERS accompanied by marriagable daughters will form a considerable portion of the passenger lists on the Red Star liner Belgenland when on her cruise around the world, which begins in December, according to L. E. Archer, Pacific coast manager for the Red Star Line.

It has been demonstrated by the number of marriages resulting from de luxe steamship cruises that as a rule Cupid commands the ship from start to finish of the voyage, and the passengers, or the younger ones at any rate, willingly obey his orders.

As most of the steaming on the 28,000 miles of the cruise of the Belgenland will be in tropical or semi-tropical latitudes, where the moon is brighter, the breezes softer and the sea a deeper blue than in the colder north, opportunity will not be wanting for scenes that should lead to thoughts of wedlock.

"On some cruises in recent years there has been a shortage of eligible young men, but in the case of the Belgenland," says Mr. Archer, "this condition will not be present, as the men about balance the women in the bookings to date."

Furthermore, the ship will carry two clergymen.

$600,000 to Be Spent on the Harding Tomb

Marion, Ohio.—At least $500,000 will be expended in the construction of the Harding memorial tomb and $100,000 in beautifying the memorial site and surrounding area included in the general landscaping scheme, Brig. Gen. Charles E. Sawyer, chairman of the executive committee and in charge of national headquarters of the Harding Memorial association here, announced.

General Sawyer has recommended to the executive board of the association that Albert D. Taylor of Cleveland be employed to have charge of the landscaping. Requests urging members of the executive committee to indorse Taylor were telegraphed from headquarters.

Contributions totaling $904,000 have been received to date. Funds in excess of the $600,000 will be set aside as an endowment for the maintenance of the memorial.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

OAK AND BALLOON

"A little boy, a very little boy, was crying, for his balloon had blown away from him and was caught up in an oak tree," said Daddy.

"Before long, though, the little boy dried his tears and he was given another balloon.

"But up in the tree the balloon and an oak leaf were talking.

"'I suppose I was very naughty,' said the balloon, 'but I did want to fly away. I just couldn't resist the temptation of taking a little trip with Mr. Wind.'

"'It's rather hard at times not to do as Mr. Wind tells you to do. I know that,' said the oak leaf.

"'Tell me about yourself,' said the balloon. 'Why are you and some few other oak leaves still clinging to the tree when all the leaves are off the other trees and when it is really winter time?'

"'Oh,' said the oak leaf, 'I must tell you about that, for it all comes from an old, old reason.'

"'Then there is a reason for it?' asked the balloon. 'When Mr. Wind brought me up here I was wondering why there were some leaves upon this tree and not upon the others.

"'And so there is a reason,' the balloon repeated; 'well, I am glad to hear that. Do tell me the reason now, for I may not stay long.

"'Mr. Wind might decide to blow me away from here. You can't tell.

"'I can't tell at any rate.'

"'Neither can I tell,' said the oak leaf. 'Yes, I will tell you my story right away.

"'There are oaks that are always with their green leaves,' said the oak leaf.

"'Such trees could not stand such a chilly climate as this is, but there are many of these trees where it is warmer.

"'Our ancestors wore green leaves

His Balloon Had Blown Away.

all the time—ever green were their frocks.

"'And as I've told you many of the family still do so who live in warmer places.

"'But we cannot do that. Still, we have a feeling about our leaves.

"'We want to keep the old family ways—just a little bit, so a few of us stay on the tree, and do not even let the storms take us away.

"'We've changed from our green frocks to red or brownish frocks—and then we stay on, with quiet brown winter coloring as our little way of showing that we remember what the old ways of the oak family have been.

"'It is the oak tree's memory. It is a very good memory that the oak trees have.'

"'I should say it was,' remarked the balloon, 'and I've been glad to hear your story. How interesting a reason!'

"'Ah,' said the oak leaf, rustling slightly, 'look at all those birds sitting on that long telegraph wire looking at the apartment houses that are along there.

"'I wonder what they are thinking about. I fancy they must be thinking that they would not like indoor apartments and houses such as people have!

"'I know I would not want to live indoors.

"'Fancy an oak tree inside a house. Dear me, that would be too terrible a thought. We need the rain and the air and the beautiful earth!'

"Then the great red sun began to think of going to bed and as he did so he too shone upon the window panes of the apartment houses, and he chatted with the city's tall buildings and he said:

"'You may be built to reach great heights but you don't begin to come up to me. No, you can't do that.

"'And what is more you never will! For you're only buildings made by men, mere men!'

"And Mr. Sun smiled his sunniest, nicest smile as he sank down behind the hill for his sleep and the oak leaf whispered to Mr. Wind:

"'It's a very interesting world after all.'"

Pink Forests.

A certain teacher, proud of the way in which she had instructed her class in botany, told the examiner to call on any scholar and to ask whatever questions he pleased on the subject.

It happened that the first pupil selected was a newcomer who had attended only two lectures.

Asked to name some botanical terms he replied: "Please, sir, I know only two—aurora borealis and delirium tremens."

Electric Laundry Serves Belgenland Globe Girdlers

A FULLY equipped, electrically operated laundry, employing no less than thirty-two expert workers, has been installed on the Red Star liner Belgenland for the convenience of her 500 passengers on her 183-day cruise around the world, starting at Los Angeles, December 20 and San Francisco, December 23.

Ordinarily, steamships are not equipped with laundries, and passengers on trans-oceanic liners, especially the slower ones, sometimes find their clean linen supply disturbingly low toward the end of a voyage.

On a world cruise, when the ship for many days is in tropic latitudes, most of the women passengers wear clothing of light color and texture that calls for frequent laundering. The men find they use more than the usual number of changes, with deck sports by day and dancing by night.

This creates a demand from passengers for laundry facilities, that taken with the ship's requirements for fresh table and bed linen, calls for the handling of several thousand pieces a week. The new laundry on the Belgenland therefore has been given generous proportions, having capacity for washing and ironing not less than 5,000 pieces a day.

The laundry occupies four rooms. Besides the main washing room, there is a drying, ironing and a delivery room. The equipment consists of two huge washing machines, electrically operated, two centrifugal dryers, two machines for starching collars, two twin ironers, and two skirtboards, a large mangle for ironing flat work, and a smaller mangle.

Laundry needed can be done and delivered within twenty-four hours.

Old American Roadway

The old Spanish road, built across Mexico in the Sixteenth century, is believed to be the oldest road on the North American continent. It was built in the form of a letter "Y," with the lower point of the steam starting at Vera Cruz on the gulf. The northern prong touches the Pacific at San Blas and the southern tip at Acapulco. Because of this road the west-bound convoys from the Philippines were spared the dangerous navigation around Cape Horn. There is still evidence that this old trail was used by the Indians before the Spaniards broadened it from a pack-mule path to a highway.

Primrose Day Memorial to English Statesman

England's "Primrose day" is a tribute to the memory of Lord Beaconsfield. The primrose was his favorite flower. The story is that when he was a young man he made a bet of a pair of gloves with a lady respecting a wreath of yellow blossoms, the point in dispute being whether they were real or artificial. Disraeli stated that they were real and won the bet. The lady thereupon presented him with one of the primroses and Disraeli, with the impetuous gallantry of youth, vowed that he would treasure the flower and adopt it as his badge. "Primrose day" was founded in 1882. Next year it was determined that an annual festival should be inaugurated. Curiously enough, the primrose has for centuries been esteemed an unlucky flower among the English country folk. Shakespeare alludes to the superstition; and to this day in East Anglia, as well as throughout the western counties, it is esteemed disastrous to take a single primrose into a farmhouse. Serious loss among chickens, lambs and calves will, it is averred, inevitably result.

Plants Set Traps for Unwary Insects

Certain plants, like certain people, require strong foods. Not satisfied with the nourishment derived from the soil, they require flesh and blood. Such plants exist by the consumption of insects and small animals, and are to be found in bogs and marshes in tropical countries. All carnivorous plants are endowed with a sense of taste, and a tasty morsel of meat is speedily devoured! The side-saddle plant, found in parts of America, sets water traps for its victims. This plant holds up to the sunlight vase-like leaves, around the mouths of which are glands that secrete honey. Tempted by the scent, the insects make their way across the leaves to the mouth of the plant; farther and farther they wander down the tube, looking for the honey. Detentive hairs prevent their exit and, tired and weary, they eventually fall into the pool secreted at the bottom of the leaf. The common sundew captures dragonflies and ants. Attracted by the gummy appearance of the rosy leaves, the feet of the visitors become securely fixed to the gum, and the red tentacles close in on the unwary insects.

Superficial Existence

We live in the sun and on the surface—a thin, plausible, superficial existence—and talk of music and prophet, of art and creation. But out of our shallow and frivolous way of life, how can greatness ever grow? Come now, let us go and be dumb. Let us sit with our hands on our mouths, a long, austere, Pythagorean lustrum. Let us live in corners, and do chores, and suffer, and weep, and drudge, with eyes and hearts that love the Lord. Silence, seclusion, austerity, may pierce deep into grandeur and secret of our being, and so diving, bring up out of secular darkness the sublimities of the moral constitution. How mean to go blazing, a gaudy butterfly, in fashionable or political salons, the fool of society, the fool of notoriety, a topic for newspapers, a piece of the street, and forfeiting the real prerogative of the russet coat, the privacy, and the true and warm heart of the citizen!—Emerson.

Primitive Homes

Lava blocks roughly quarried provide the rural Icelander with his building material. His farmstead consists of a group of small cottages joined together. The lava blocks are laid one on the other and the crevices are stopped up with moss or earth. Some of these houses have wood rafters, but the majority of them have whale ribs instead. These are covered with brushwood, on top of which turf is heaped. The turf bears a good crop of grass, which is carefully cut for hay. The houses have no chimneys, and a fire is never kept in any room except the kitchen, even in the coldest weather. The smoke passes out through a hole in the roof. The only windows are pieces of glass, or thin skin, four inches square. No attention is given to ventilation, and the atmosphere of the house is almost unendurable to a foreigner. The natives' sense of smell is deadened by the universal habit of taking snuff.

Asia Like House's Roof

The continent of Asia, according to Dr. Sven Hedin, writing in Popular Mechanics Magazine, is like the roof of a house, irregular in shape, falling off gently in the various directions. From its crown rain water is pouring down in all directions. "No matter where the watercourses arise they are still, as they sweep onward, crossed here and there and again by almost innumerable paths, and countless likewise are the bridges." The railway bridges, Doctor Hedin says, are built everywhere on the same principle, but the primitive bridges with which Asia abounds are of the most diverse character. He enumerates "bridges of stone, of tile, of iron and cement, of chains, ropes and cables, of wood, posts, plants and branches, and the natural rocks which in the course of time have broken asunder from a mountain and tumbled down into some wild ravine where they now serve as spans for the natives."

WOODSIDE

Even in this country village the New Year received a hand when he appeared upon the stage. The shooting of guns, the blowing of horns and the pounding of pans should have sufficiently impressed him with his welcome.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel C. Jackling gave a Christmas party to a number of their friends at San Francisco, but the New Year's holidays they spent at their place here.

Mr. and Mrs. Coington Pringle were hosts at a New Year's party, which was one of several affairs given on New Year's Eve at the Menlo Country Club.

Nearly a score of our residents traveled to Berkeley on New Year's Day to see the California Bear uphold the athletic reputation of the west against the invading Quakers. And mightily pleased we were, not only at the final score, but at the way in which the score was earned. But our interest was divided between the game being played and the man with the megaphone who circled the grounds with the report of the scores as they were made in Pasadena.

The Christmas entertainment of the local Sunday school was held on Sunday evening at the church, having been postponed until that date because of rain. The program took the form of an entertainment given by Mother Goose for Mrs. Santa Claus while waiting for the arrival of Cris Cringle himself. Here all the many children of Mother Goose took part until the entrance of Santa Himself. The principal parts were taken by Margaret Stewart as Mother Goose and Mildred Frasier as Mrs. Santa Claus and Raymond von Savoye as the good old Saint.

The funeral of Jesse Secker, who figured at Woodside and later died, was attended by many of the Woodside folks, for he was well known and had many lasting friends in this community.

SUIT FILED OVER GARAGE

Charles Hammar and Hugo Hultberg filed suit in the Superior court here this week against George S. McGee and his wife, Gertrude McGee of San Mateo Park. The plaintiffs in the action alledged that a garage built by the McGees on their property in San Mateo Park extends over onto land owned by the plaintiffs for a distance carrying from two and a half to three feet and for a length of fifteen feet.

The plaintiffs in the action are now engaged in the erection of a building on their property, but claim that the fact that the garage of the McGees is partly on their land it will interfere with the construction of their building.

Title to the land is asked by the plaintiffs, who also ask the court to order the removal of the garage and the payment of damages of $750. Of this $500 is asked for alleged injury to the property value, and $250 by reason of their inability to erect their own building.

JUDGE REBUKES JURORS IN SCATHING LECTURE

The feelings of the twelve jurors who sat in the court of Judge Buck Monday were not spared by the judge in a short but pointed lecture delivered upon the question of prejudice in a jury. The case to which Judge Buck had reference was the trial of Pinkey Hall who was recently convicted of bootlegging after a jury at his first trial had disagreed.

According to Judge Buck one of the women jurors on the case, after the jury had reported its verdict, was heard talking to another woman in the coridor. The conversation between the two women was heard by the district attorney and the court reporter and was taken down in shorthand by the latter. The juror spoke as follows:

"Oh, darn these Prohis"—meaning, of course, these prohibitionists—"what if the soldiers at Palo Alto do get a little drink? No good corn whiskey never hurt anybody. I never heard of any of them being blinded. I want it known that some of these women voted for acquittal. Why pick on a poor little nigger?"

The jury was divided, three women holding out for acquittal. Judge Buck continued, "Now, members of the jury, there were none of those questions raised before you in the trial of this case; good corn whiskey or bad corn whiskey was not referred to; nor was the fact of the soldiers at the camp at Palo Alto referred to; nor was the fact of whether they were blinded or not referred to—there was nothing said about it at all.

"Now, I am not talking to you in anger this morning; far be it; but it is with deep mortification that I can find among the high class of women of which San Mateo county is noted, that we can find three such women."

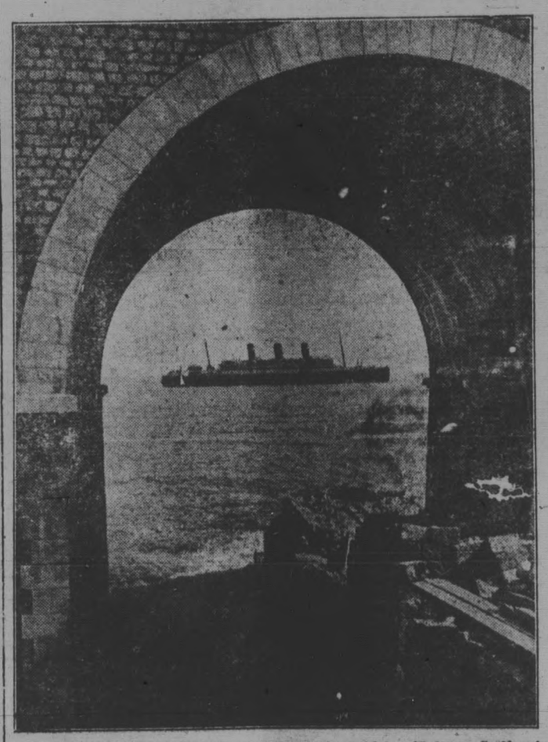
Huge Steamer to Leave On Cruise Around World



The Steamer Belgenland of the Red Star Line which will leave California ports on around the world cruise touching at 14 countries and visiting 60 cities. The Belgenland is the largest steamer to ever be sent around the globe.

CALIFORNIA'S importance in world-wide travel will be emphasized more strongly than ever before by the visit in December of the Red Star Liner Belgenland to California ports. It will be from California that the ship will take her actual departure on a cruise around the world, carrying not only several hundred tourists from eastern states and a number from Canada and Europe, but also fully a hundred booked in California and adjacent states.

The importance of California's seaports also will be emphasized by the Belgenland's arrival and departure here, since she is the largest steamship ever to be sent around the globe, and also the largest yet to enter the ports of Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Rating as the world's ninth largest ocean liner, the Belgenland registers 27,200 tons gross measurement, while her displacement tonnage (weight) usual method of expressing the size of ships in many trades is no less than 40,000 tons, or nearly double that of the Panama Pacific Line steamships, although they are known to most Californians as giant liners.

Due at Los Angeles in the early morning of December 20, the Belgenland will remain at that port throughout the day, sailing for San Francisco at 7 p. m. Arriving there at 5 p. m. December 21, she will remain until 6 a. m. December 23.

At Los Angeles harbor, the Belgenland will berth at Municipal Pier No. 60 in the Outer Harbor, and at San Francisco at Pier No. 32.

At each port, the tourists on board make shore excursions to local interest, while the Pacific coast travelers will install themselves in their quarters, which are to be their floating home for four months.

Classed as one of the luxury liners of the Atlantic, the Belgenland which is owned by the Red Star Line, in summer plies between New York, Plymouth, Cherbourg and Antwerp. She has been commissioned but two years and is especially adapted to cruising, having very broad decks, no less than three veranda cafes, a deck fitted for outdoor sports, a ball room, turkish bath, swimming pool, tennis courts, two gymnasiums, card rooms, electric elevators, photograph shop, a book store, many private suites, three smoking rooms, and a dining saloon where meals are served on the restaurant system, without extra charge.

The Belgenland will sail westward from New York on December 4, for an absence of four and a half months, in the course of which she will steam 28,000 miles and visit 14 countries giving her passengers opportunity to see no less than 60 cities. She will call first at Havana and will pass through the Panama Canal.

On leaving San Francisco the Belgenland will steam for Hilo and Honolulu. Thence she will proceed to Japan. There she will visit Yokohama and Kobe and also the naval base at Miyajima, in the Inland sea. The latter is not open to ordinary ships and the Belgenland's call is by special permission of the Imperial Japanese government.

The remainder of the Belgenland's itinerary calls for stops in ports of China, the Philippines, the Straits Settlements, Java, India, Ceylon and Egypt—with side trips to the Sudan and the Holy Land—thence to Italy, Southern France, Gibraltar and across the Atlantic to New York.

NEWS OF MENLO PARK

MENLO

George Casey, the Palo Alto cement contractor, is in the Lane hospital, San Francisco, where he is about to undergo an operation for an ailment that has bothered him for some little time. Casey will be confined to the institution for a month.

A merry-go-around with numerous concessions that delight the youngsters, has reached town and is located on the corner of Oak Grove avenue and the highway. Young and old are lured to this amusement emporium where the fleeting dime brings joy to the spender. It is a wholesome show under splendid management, where one may spend a pleasant hour amid joyous scenes. The management announces the show will continue until Sunday night.

P. M. Lansdale, the Palo Alto banker, this week purchased a lot on the highway, opposite the grammar school. He is to erect a two-story building on the property.

The Curlett house, formerly the Jane Loveland property on Santa Cruz avenue extended, was sold this week to a Palo Alto contractor. The old residence is a land mark, having been erected in the sixties. It was originally owned by the late J. Farroll who was then the gardener for Milton S. Latham, at that time U. S. Senator. He built a palatial home, now the Timothy Hopkins place. The beautiful gardens surrounding the home was the show place of the state. Latham drove a tandem and the prancing horses composing the team could be seen on the highway every afternoon. The outfit with livery coachman and footman cut quite a swath in these by-gone days. Farrell was a noted gardener brought here from Ireland to care for the big estate and lived in the cottage that now most likely will be wrecked to make way for a modern business building.

Evelyn Maloney, the pretty young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Maloney met with a serious accident at her home on Pine street last Saturday. The little girl fell from a fence, suffering a compound fracture of the bone of her left arm. The little sufferer will be confined to her home for several weeks.

It is rumored that Edward Derry has sold his lot on Santa Cruz avenue to a San Francisco business man who will erect a large building on the property. Derry only bought the realty a short time ago and sold it for a nice profit.

C. F. Slinger, for several years the owner of the Fremont taxi, has retired from business and has moved into his new home on Santa Cruz avenue. Slinger contemplates launching into the building business.

Madame Guerin, for the past twenty years a teacher of the Sacred Heart University, will leave in a short time for the mother house at Chicago, to remain there. Hundreds of her former pupils throughout the state, and the students now at the institution, regret her departure, for she was loved and admired by them as well as by all who knew her. None knew her but to love her and admire her devotion to religion and to incalculating the true spirit of womanhood in those under her charge. Mother Guerin's great work here will not soon be forgotten.

The new electric lights installed in town are giving satisfaction and are an improvement on the former lamps. If they were placed in the center of the street instead of on the poles they would be more effective in lighting all dark corners on the streets and avenues.

Cornelius D. Maloney, who died at Berkeley this week, was born in Menlo Park 57 years ago and was a son of the late Michael Malony. The deceased at the time of his death was the manager of theBerkeley office of the East Bay Water Company. He left here in his youth and with his parents settled in Alameda county. Left to survive the deceased is a widow, Mrs. Hermine Maloney, and two daughters, Mrs. Frances Dietrich and Mrs. Katherine Esola, both of Richmond. He also leaves a sister, Mrs. M. C. McLaughlin of Berkeley.

R. S. Armstrong, consulting engineer for the firm of Harrington, Howard and Ash of Kansas City, who is supervising the construction of the Dumbarton bridge, has arrived in Palo Alto and has leased apartments there. The assistant engineer will be here during the week from Kansas City and probably will locate in Menlo Park. Preliminary work on the bridge has begun and active work will begin by the middle of the month. Mr. Armstrong is a native of Eureka and for the past ten years has resided in the east.

Many from Menlo Park attended the big football game at Pasadena on Thursday between the Notre Dame team and Stanford. Among those who motored to the scene of the battle were: John Storey and wife, Dr. Redmond Cochrane, Joe Weeden, Edward Moriarty, John McSweet and James McGucken.

M. J. Loughlin and pretty wife spent the New Year with friends in Los Angeles.

SAN MATEO BUILDING & LOAN TO DISTRIBUTE, $20,000

On January 15th the local Building and Loan Association will distribute $20,000 among those of its members who own stock in series 83. One hundred shares will be matured each share having a valuation of $200.

The thrifty stockholders referred to are privileged to receive their money in cash or to invest it in the association, receiving certificates of investment which return interest at 6 per cent, payable semi-annually, with the same withdrawal privileges as are given to other investors.

Citizens of Redwood City generally, regardless of their affiliations as stockholders, are invited to lend their money to the association for which interest at 6 per cent will be paid semi-annually, with the same withdrawal privileges as are given to other investors.

This investment is considered gilt-edge as it is secured by the extensive resources of the association, not the least of which is its high-class mortgage loans amounting to $750,000.

The local Building and Loan Association has been in existence thirty years and during that period has erected countless homes in Redwood City and the surrounding country. It has the reputation of being one of the best managed in California. Its directors are among the most substantial men of the community.

The association's fine new home on Broadway, now in the course of erection, will be ready for occupancy in February.
